

Thinking about relocating to West Kent?

Read about what Fosse Bank can offer your family...

You have only to drive around the Sevenoaks, Tonbridge and Tunbridge Wells area, taking in the vibrant village communities, to see why so many parents of small children choose to move to this area. Many prospective parents tell me that as children themselves, they played outside, climbed trees, made dens and cycled with friends. This feeling of freedom and independence is what parents want for their children and there is so much space for these activities in Kent.

The second reason for relocation is the plethora of excellent schools in West Kent, including state and independent primary and senior schools. Many parents choose independent primary schools for their smaller class sizes and preparation for grammar school. I am very proud of the percentage pass rate (between four and five times the Kent average) that Fosse Bank pupils achieve, but also that every child ends up at the right school for that individual.

The third reason is practicality. A school with wraparound care from early in the morning to early evening enables parents to continue working, or, as is often the case, to return to work after maternity or paternity leave. That Fosse Bank is very close to a railway station, and has great holiday provision for two to eleven-year olds, is also much appreciated by our parents. Our proximity to London also means we can take advantage of museums and art galleries too.

The fourth reason is that Fosse Bank is simply a wonderful school.
